This document reproduces the official eBay Money Back Guarantee policy, retrieved from export.ebay.com (eBay Inc.). It is real, live platform policy text, not synthetic content. Section structure mirrors the original policy's table of contents.

1. Coverage, Eligibility Requirements, and Exclusions

eBay Money Back Guarantee covers most transactions on eBay, meaning buyers can get their money back if an item didn't arrive, is faulty or damaged, or doesn't match the listing.

eBay Money Back Guarantee applies when:

- The buyer doesn't receive an item.
- The item received by the buyer doesn't match the listing — for example, the seller sent the wrong item, or the item arrives broken, damaged, or faulty.
- The seller doesn't fulfill their return policy as stated in the listing.

As a buyer, for your transaction to be eligible:

- You must complete and pay for your purchase on eBay.com using an eligible payment method at checkout.
- You must meet the requirements specified in this policy, including taking action within the required time frames.
- The item may not be an excluded item or subject to any additional exclusions.
- You may not seek resolution for the same issue by another resolution method.

As a seller, for transactions where eBay Money Back Guarantee applies:

- You are responsible for delivering the item that was described in the listing, honoring your stated return policy, and providing a resolution when a buyer reports a problem with an order.
- If the purchase was completed on ebay.com, you must meet the requirements specified in this policy, including taking action within the required time frames, even if the item was listed on a different eBay site.

2. Eligible Payment Methods and Excluded Items

Eligible for coverage, when paid via eBay checkout:

- Credit card or debit card
- PayPal or PayPal Credit
- Apple Pay or Google Pay

- Venmo (US sellers only)
- Spendable funds
- Alipay
- Wire transfer facilitated by eBay
- eBay gift card, eBay voucher, or eBay Bucks

Not covered: items paid for where any part of the payment was completed outside of eBay, such as bank transfer, cash, money orders, or escrow services.

Excluded items

- Real Estate, Websites, Businesses for Sale
- Digital content, intangible goods, and NFTs (including physical items combined with NFTs)
- Classified Ads and Services
- Sports trading card case breaks, box breaks, and pack breaks sold by pre-approved sellers
- Travel tickets or vouchers
- Industrial equipment and heavy machinery
- Motor vehicles, recreational vehicles, aircraft, and boats

3. When the Buyer Doesn't Receive an Item

Sellers are required to deliver the item to the address in the Order details, unless the buyer selected a local pickup option. If the item doesn't arrive at the address provided by the buyer at checkout, or isn't made available for collection, the buyer is entitled to a full refund, including original shipping costs (if applicable).

Action	Time Frame
Buyer reports item hasn't arrived	Once estimated/actual delivery date has passed, up to 30 calendar days after
Seller responds to the report	Latest 3 business days after report date
Ask eBay to step in	Earliest 3 business days, latest 21 business days after report date

Evidence of successful delivery (all required)

- Tracking number from an integrated carrier, uploaded to eBay, showing a shipping scan before the latest estimated delivery date.
- A delivery status of "delivered" or "attempted delivery" (or local equivalent).
- The date of delivery or attempted delivery.
- The recipient's address, matching the zip code (or city/county if zip unavailable) on the Order details page.
- Signature confirmation, on orders with a total cost of $750 or more.

Exclusions and special coverage (selected)

- Items collected by a third party on behalf of the buyer: not covered.

- Buyer-arranged shipping (e.g., courier pickup): not covered.
- Invalid or incorrect address provided by buyer at checkout: not covered.
- Item shipped internationally and didn't clear customs because the seller overstated value or misrepresented location: covered. If the buyer simply didn't pay duties: not covered.
- Buyer refused delivery because shipping cost was still owing due to insufficient postage by the seller: covered. If a package arrives empty or damaged in transit, the buyer should accept delivery and report that the item doesn't match the listing rather than refusing it.

4. When the Item Received Doesn't Match the Listing

Sellers are required to deliver the item as described in the listing. If the buyer receives the wrong item, or the item arrives broken, damaged, or faulty (and was not clearly described as such), they are entitled to return it for a refund, even if the seller doesn't offer returns. Buyers and sellers may agree to another solution, such as a full or partial refund while the buyer keeps the item, or a replacement item instead of a refund.

Action	Time Frame
Buyer requests a return	Latest 30 calendar days after delivery date, or seller's stated return window, whichever is longer
Seller responds to the request	Latest 3 business days after request date
Buyer sends item back	Date specified in eBay's email/return request
Seller issues refund	Latest 2 business days after receiving the returned item
Ask eBay to step in	21 business days after request date (no response), or 10 business days after refund deadline passed

Deciding the outcome

If eBay determines the seller did not meet return requirements: the buyer receives a full refund (item + original shipping), the seller reimburses eBay, and the buyer may not be required to return the item. If eBay determines the buyer did not meet return requirements, the buyer may not receive a full refund.

Exclusions and special coverage (selected)

- The buyer returned the item used or damaged: covered if the use was necessary to determine quality/function, or the damage resulted from that use. Otherwise, sellers may deduct loss in value (see Condition of Returned Items Policy).
- Strong indicators the item is counterfeit: covered; the buyer must request a return but may not be required to ship the item back.
- The item is hazardous to ship: covered; buyer may not be required to ship back.
- The item no longer has value (e.g., expired perishable, cancelled event ticket): covered; buyer may not be required to ship back.

- The item arrived after the latest estimated delivery date: treated as if the item didn't match the listing.

5. When the Seller Doesn't Fulfill Their Return Policy

If the listing states the seller offers returns, the buyer may return the item for any reason, including changed mind ("remorse" returns). The seller must allow a full refund for such requests within their stated policy window; original shipping costs may be excluded. When the seller doesn't offer returns, or a remorse request falls outside the window, the seller may accept or deny at their discretion; accepting treats it as if returns had been offered.

6. Return Requirements and Return Shipping

Seller requirements

- Respond within the return request and offer a solution for "item not as described" claims.
- Honor the stated return policy for remorse returns.
- Provide a return shipping label (or eBay-acceptable method) when responsible for return shipping.
- Keep return address current; pay any customs fees/duties on returned items.
- Issue refunds through the eBay return request, and provide tracking for replacement/exchange shipments.

Buyer requirements

- Return the item in the same condition received; used, damaged, or incomplete returns may have value deducted.
- Use the provided shipping label or agreed method when seller is responsible for return shipping.
- Ensure any images added to a return request are relevant and policy-compliant.
- When strong counterfeit indicators exist, cooperate with proper disposal and not resell the item.

Reason for Return	Who Pays Return Shipping
Item doesn't match the listing	Seller
"Remorse" / change of mind	Per seller's stated return policy

7. Loss of Coverage

Buyers can lose protection if they voluntarily close a request, open duplicate claims through other resolution methods, engage in fraudulent or abusive buying behavior, or violate an eBay policy.

Fraudulent or abusive buyer behavior includes, but is not limited to:

- Colluding with a seller to wrongly declare an item's value for customs.
- Filing a chargeback after already receiving a refund.
- Claiming an item was not received when there is proof of delivery to the address on the Order details page.
- Falsely claiming an item was not as described.
- Opening duplicate cases using other buyer protection programs.

- Returning an item other than the original item received.
- Using or damaging an item and then returning it.

eBay reserves the right to indefinitely suspend an individual's coverage under eBay Money Back Guarantee and impose other sanctions, including warnings, blocking the ability to request returns/refunds, and account suspension.

8. Refunds and Currency

For most purchases, buyers are refunded to their original payment method. If eBay is unable to send the refund to the original method, it may issue refunds by another method such as PayPal, coupons, or vouchers redeemable on eBay. If a buyer used eBay currency conversion at checkout, the same exchange rate applied at purchase is used for the refund. eBay does not cover losses from exchange-rate fluctuations applied by the buyer's bank, card issuer, or payment provider.
